

The engineer violated “design by contract” since he tried to change the behavior of the `getArea()` method inherited from the superclass. The new `getArea()` lost the guarantee and broke the postconditions. The result of `Square().getArea()` is no longer correct, when system constraints change. The engineer redefined the abstraction of `getArea()`, which will increase the cost of system maintenance.